

Fluency Passage—Fiction

Three-Point Shot

Name ______ Word Count: 175

Three-Point Shot

| Frederic raced down the block with the wind whipping past | 10 |
|---|-----|
| his ears. Nothing was stopping him, not after he had sunk that | 22 |
| three-point shot just under the buzzer to win the big game. This | 34 |
| was his fourth year as a point guard for his school, but only the | 48 |
| first year he'd been off the bench. He'd never been tall or fast, | 61 |
| so he'd slowly made up for it by practicing until his aim was | 74 |
| perfect. And now, finally, all that work had paid off. | 84 |
| "Gram!" he shouted, skidding his bike on the dirt lot in front | 96 |
| of the apartment house. Inside, Gram was already laughing, | 105 |
| waving her cane to celebrate. "Tell me about every single | 115 |
| minute, and start at the beginning," she said. | 123 |
| "But—" Frederic interrupted, wanting to tell her right away | 133 |
| about his last shot. | 137 |
| "You should know, Frederic," she said, her blind eyes | 146 |
| somehow finding his face, "I like a story with a beginning, | 159 |
| middle, and end." Frederic finally caught his breath from | 166 |
| his ride home, smiled, and began at the beginning. | 175 |

Fluency Passage—Fiction

Three-Point Shot

Name _____

Word Count: 175

Three-Point Shot

Frederic raced down the block with the wind whipping past his ears. Nothing was stopping him, not after he had sunk that three-point shot just under the buzzer to win the big game. This was his fourth year as a point guard for his school, but only the first year he'd been off the bench. He'd never been tall or fast, so he'd slowly made up for it by practicing until his aim was perfect. And now, finally, all that work had paid off.

84

"Gram!" he shouted, skidding his bike on the dirt lot in front of the apartment house. Inside, Gram was already laughing, 105 waving her cane to celebrate. "Tell me about every single 115 minute, and start at the beginning," she said.

"But—" Frederic interrupted, wanting to tell her right away about his last shot. 133

"You should know, Frederic," she said, her blind eyes

146
somehow finding his face, "I like a story with a beginning, middle, and end." Frederic finally caught his breath from his ride home, smiled, and began at the beginning.

175

| | Read 1 | Read 2 | Read 3 | Read 4 | Read 5 | Read 6 |
|------------------------------|--------|--------|--------|--------|--------|--------|
| WPM | | | | | | |
| Errors | | | | | | |
| WCPM | | | | | | |
| Accuracy / Reading Rate % | | | | | | |